Two evening views in Gyeongju · sample

Let's take our time together. We can stay a little longer somewhere you love.

Trip style

A same-day family evening walk

Example hours

17:00 - 20:30

Chosen sights

2 sights · 1 meal · no overnight stay

Trip nickname

_____

This public sample shows the layout of a completed travel book. It is not a personal travel plan.

Dates, visits, meals and travel times are illustrative. Live routing and opening hours have not been checked.

Sunset varies by season. Check opening hours, entry conditions and actual travel times before visiting.

Our itinerary at a glance

Time	Our itinerary	Stop
Undated · one-day example
17:00 → 18:00	Dinner · choose your own restaurant Example meal near Donggung Palace and Wolji Pond.	Meal
18:00 → 19:00	Donggung Palace and Wolji Pond Walk around the pond and compare the buildings with their reflections.	Visit
19:00 → 19:30	Travel to the next stop An illustrative 30-minute walk. Actual travel time varies with your route.	Travel
19:30 → 20:10	Woljeonggyo Bridge Notice how the bridge joins the riverbanks and take photos from a safe viewing spot.	Visit
20:10 → 20:30	Rest and record the day Keep one memorable scene in words or a sketch.	Break

01 Donggung Palace and Wolji Pond

Everyday life recovered from a pond

Photo · photographed by little trip

At Donggung and Wolji, the reflections are only the beginning. This royal retreat was associated with welcoming important guests and royal events. Records describe making the pond in 674 and building Donggung afterward. Water, islands and buildings were arranged beside a center of government.

The shore combines straight and curved edges, with artificial islands inside it. Investigators also identified facilities for water entering and leaving. A beautiful setting required people to think about water management. Compare the outline visible from your permitted viewing place with the whole shape on an official plan.

Smaller stories came from underwater: excavations recovered vessels, tiles and wooden objects that reveal aspects of life. Wolji is more than a place to learn royal names; it offers clues to what palace people used and how they organized space. The former name Anapji refers to the same site, so it is all right if the names first seem confusing. Let us find two stories together: the garden we see and the life preserved beneath its surface.

> Good to know together Wolji's 674 foundation record, shaped shore, islands and water facilities reveal a royal garden. Excavated vessels, tiles and wooden objects add everyday life to that landscape. Connect what a child sees above the water with what finds from the pond can tell us.

Address 102 Wonhwa-ro, Gyeongju

A little mission together
From the visitor path, notice where water meets land.

What do you think?
Why would inlet and outlet facilities matter to maintaining a beautiful garden pond?

Our discoveries

A few words or a little sketch.

02 Woljeonggyo Bridge

A bridge that returned after a long absence

Photo · photographed by little trip

At Woljeonggyo, look separately at what is below and above the crossing. Stone piers support a wooden structure and roof. A bridge is not only something beautiful: it joins routes on opposite sides of water.

The Samguk Sagi records bridges south of the palace in 760, during King Gyeongdeok. Woljeonggyo linked Wolseong with the southern area. The wooden Silla bridge did not survive unchanged. Researchers studied the remaining foundations and piers together with records, and reconstruction was completed in 2018. The present crossing brings old traces and modern investigation together.

Distinguish evidence in the supports from decisions about restoring what stood above them. We cannot name every traveler or the goods they carried, but we can understand how a bridge helped movement between places. Imagine this river first without a bridge and then with one. How would the same landscape change the ways people could meet?

> Good to know together Woljeonggyo linked Wolseong with the area south of Namcheon. A 760 record and surviving foundations informed its reconstruction, completed in 2018. Consider how a bridge changes movement between two areas, and how remains and modern work meet in the present view.

Address 274 Gyo-dong, Gyeongju

A little mission together
From a safe viewing spot, locate both banks and the crossing direction.

What do you think?
What different jobs do the stone supports and wooden structure perform?

Our discoveries

A few words or a little sketch.

Pack a little happiness

Everyday essentials · suggested

- Phone, charger and power bank
- Comfortable shoes and a water bottle
- Tickets and booking confirmations, if booked

Peek at the weather before you go, and pack for a comfortable day.

On the way home

Where would you have liked to stay longer today? Share one scene you would like to remember.

Information, estimated times and prices may differ from conditions on the day.